Foreword

Johannes Hahn
European Commissioner for European Neighbourhood Policy and Enlargement Negotiations

Roma are one of Europe's largest ethnic minorities, with 10 to 12 million living in Europe. About 1 million of these live in the Western Balkans and 2.8 million in Turkey. They share a rich culture and history that is inextricably linked to Europe, but have also faced a long history of exclusion. Too many Roma are still victims of racism, discrimination, social exclusion or poverty, and improving this situation continues to be a key priority for the European Commission.

Investing in the inclusion, integration and empowerment of Roma – especially Roma youth and young adults – will make it possible for them to play an active role in the integration of their communities. They are not only great potential actors today; they are also the shapers of tomorrow. It is up to us, as European societies founded on values such as equality for all, to assume our responsibilities and safeguard the lives of all citizens without exception.

In 2014, the European Commission launched the EU Roma Integration Award for the Western Balkans and Turkey to raise awareness of the political importance of Roma integration as part of the enlargement process, to enhance the role of civil society, and to show the commitment of the European Commission to the social inclusion of Roma.

This year sees the celebration of the second edition of the EU Roma Integration Award. 13 projects have been recognised for their contributions to the inclusion, integration and empowerment of Roma children and young adults, who represent the future of their communities and are perhaps the best-placed to drive integration forward locally.

These projects have supported a range of activities including a theatre production, the establishment of a youth football club, music and dance workshops, and the awarding of scholarships and internships, leading to increased participation in society and the building of advocacy and self-esteem for all involved.

The great commitment shown by these organisations has already had a tangible impact on Roma integration and should inspire future efforts to continue the good work. By honouring these projects in line with EU principles, and by increasing their visibility and sustainability, we can help improve the lives of Roma communities across the Western Balkans and Turkey and empower them to become active members of their wider societies.

With this award, I am proud that the European Union is highlighting people committed to being today's and tomorrow's promoters of a more inclusive society, drawing on the strength and richness of all its members.

As a follow-up to the Roma Decade, the European Union launched the Roma Integration 2020 initiative<sup>1</sup> for the Western Balkans and Turkey in 2016. Based on the experience and results of the Decade, the initiative aims to build stronger Roma integration policies. The initiative is implemented with the support of the Regional Cooperation Council and co-funded with the Open Society Foundation. Together with partner countries, we are working to provide tangible results on the ground, to improve the social inclusion of Roma into society and to provide support to the most vulnerable groups.

The European Union is also providing substantial funds for social inclusion measures through the Instrument for Pre-accession Assistance. Areas of special focus are measures to increase access to education and decrease drop-out rates, to foster employment opportunities, and to improve health and housing conditions, particularly by ensuring access to public services, civil documentation and registration.
